Although in the last five years number of centres offering M.Phil. Clinical Psychology training and the number of students undergoing the professional training in clinical psychology have increased by many folds the available manpower is still no match to the number required to meet the growing demands in mental health area.

In order to meet this gap, professional training of one-year duration in clinical psychology laying emphasis on critical domains has been developed. The candidates on successful completion of the Professional Diploma in Clinical Psychology can register with RCI as

The Clinical Psychologists (Associate) are distinguished from the M.Phil. qualified Clinical Psychologist. The later are full-fledged professionals with higher level of competency and responsibility in service, academic and research areas; whereas Clinical Psychologists (Associate) by the nature and duration of their training are consider not fully adept to function as an academician. They are, however, considered competent enough to involve in a broad range of professional service activities. The clinical psychologist (Associate) will be used as an underfill class for existing clinical psychologist positions under state and central government sectors.

However, the role in such appointments is limited only for providing clinical services to clients with mental illness and does not involve independent responsibilities in academic activities such as teaching/training/guiding/supervising students of clinical psychology at the academic departments. In these activities Diploma qualified may be assigned roles of Clinical Assistant and/or Teaching Assistant or Junior Consultant as deemed fit in teaching/training centers.
